AN INDEX TO INDEXES	1
APPENDIX: FREQUENCY TABLE	75
AUTHOR-TITLE INDEX	78

PREFACE

Altho indexes, as separate publications, date their development only back to the nineteenth century, nevertheless they are, at the present time, essential tools of the library profession. How we once did without them we do not know; we do know, however, that we now use these timesavers daily in our work and that they are essential to its efficient accomplishment.

New indexes are appearing every year, especially in the field of books. Periodical indexes have had an earlier start and are now well-established, but the indexing of material found in books is really just beginning. Publishers and librarians are coöperating to accomplish such publications, and the strides made in this direction have been rapid.

PURPOSE AND SCOPE

Our purpose in this work is to assemble into one volume a selection of published indexes which will aid librarians and students who wish to quickly locate the index-sources of the various subject fields. It may also be used as a companion volume to the forthcoming "Local indexes in American libraries," compiled by the Junior Members Round Table of the American Library Association and now being edited by the writer. This latter work will list unpublished indexes located in American libraries.

It has been difficult to draw a clear line of demarcation between indexes and bibliographies. All indexes are of course bibliographies, but not all bibliographies are indexes. While in most cases we have attempted to interpret the word index in its strictest meaning, ("A table, list or file, usually arranged alphabetically, for facilitating reference to topics, names, objects, etc. especially in a book or a collection" — Webster) yet we have made some exceptions. We have included some few titles which are only bibliographies, for one of two reasons; (1) to complete the coverage of a certain subject for a period of years (i.e. Tests, Mental); (2) to bring out certain titles whose analytical indexes were especially valuable, thus making the work fall into this category (i.e. Quotations), indexes to certain catalogs (i.e. Standard catalog), and indexes to sets of books (i.e. Encyclopedias).

Five different types of indexes are incorporated: (1) Special indexes, (2) Indexes to sets of books, (3) Periodical indexes, (4) Cumulative indexes to individual periodicals, and (5) Government document indexes. They are not segregated under these headings, however, but are interfiled according to our plan of subject arrangement (see below).

With the exception of type number 1, special indexes, only American indexes are included, since the inclusion of English and foreign indexes of the other four types would lengthen this work beyond its purpose. In the case of special indexes, some English works were chosen because of their frequent and immediate use in most libraries. Thus we have attempted to select those indexes which would be found in the majority of libraries (see also Frequency table, and Periodicals) and those which have either current usage or historic value.

FREQUENCY TABLE

At the suggestion of Dr. Louis Shores, Director of Peabody Library School of Nashville, Tennessee, we are including a "Frequency Table" in the appendix. This was compiled through the coöperation of reference librarians in representative public, university and college, teacher training and state libraries, chosen from representative sections of the United States. Indexes in the Frequency Table are starred throughout the work.

ARRANGEMENT AND SCOPE

Over 1,000 separate indexes are listed in our work, under 280 different subjects. While the list is selective, it may also be called somewhat comprehensive, notwithstanding the fact that we have omitted several hundred titles which were in the original card file.

The arrangement is by subject, with an author-title index. The subject headings were chosen from no particular source, but were adapted from various sources for the special needs of this bibliography. While such headings as Books, Business and commerce, Periodicals, General, etc. might not be approved in general catalogs, nevertheless they are entirely adequate for our purpose. We have included cross-references when necessary.

BIBLIOGRAPHIC INFORMATION

Author, title, publisher and place of publication, date, and pages are given for each book. Price is not indicated because this work is not intended primarily as a buying list (altho of course it can be used to check library holdings and build up a collection), and many out-of-print titles are included. Annotations are likewise excluded because, for most of the indexes such as periodicals, they would be neither necessary nor desirable. Uniformity seemed preferable.

Information for cumulative indexes of periodicals includes name of periodical, place of publication, volumes and dates. Altho some of these are published separately, the majority are issued as part of the magazines which they index, and thus further bibliographic information is nonessential. In the case of indexes to proceedings of societies, etc., the same procedure is followed; a few titles do not give place of publication however, as publication is often "let out" to highest bidder and thus names of press and locality do not appear.

To our knowledge there are only five published lists of cumulative indexes to periodicals (one of which is still in press), all of which are arranged by title rather than subject. We thot, therefore, a subject list would also be useful since the value of such lists was evident. In regard to their usefulness, Miss Isadore Mudge says:¹ "... while most of the periodicals are indexed in periodical indexes, nevertheless approach is not always the same as for detailed subject interest. Years covered are not always complete in periodical indexes, and information is not always complete (e.g. I.A.I.: does not give author entries of articles)."

The primary bases for selection of these individual periodicals were the aforementioned lists, as follows:

- (1-3) Roys, Margaret, comp. Separate indexes to individual periodicals
In International index, 1924-1927, p.v-x.
 International index, 1928-1931, p.v-xi.
 International index, 1931-1934, p.v-xiv.
- (4) Cumulative indexes to individual periodicals (by Margaret Roys)
 In Bibliographic index, v.1, p333ff. 1939.
- (5) Haskell, Daniel C. A checklist of cumulative indexes to individual periodicals in the New York public library. N. Y., N. Y. public library. (In press.)

Union lists were likewise a source of information, as they showed the frequency of certain periodicals in representative areas. The following were especially used:

- Gregory, Winifred. Union list of serials (and supplements). N. Y., Wilson.
 N. Y. Special libraries. Union list of special libraries of N. Y. metropolitan district. 1931.
 Special libraries assoc. of Southern California chapter. Union list of periodicals in libraries of Southern California. 3d ed. rev. and enl. 1941.
 Special libraries asso. of San Francisco Bay Region chapter. Union list of serials in San Francisco Bay Region, 1939.

Cumulative indexes to individual English and foreign periodicals were excluded, not only because of the prohibitive increase in this work which their inclusion would entail, but also because of their infrequent use in the average library. The general indexes to periodicals, especially International index, were thot sufficient to cover the use of such periodicals. On the other hand, indexes to older American indexes, now discontinued, and early indexes to current periodicals are both included, not only for their historic value but also because Poole and other indexes did not include, or if they did, the information given was too brief.

A few annual indexes are included such as Life, where no cumulative index has yet been published, and the annual index is indispensable. This is also the case with some government documents. It must be remembered, tho, that while annual indexes are not usually included in this list, yet they should be used in connection with the cumulative indexes in order to bring the latter up-to-date.

USE OF INDEXES

An important consideration in the use of indexes is the necessity of making them readily accessible to students and other patrons of the library, as well as convenient to the librarian. The most efficient method of displaying and shelving indexes is by means of the Index Table. While a table intended primarily for periodical indexes is usually considered sufficient, we should like to suggest that such a table be made to include special book indexes as well. Many librarians segregate a few such indexes for ready reference at their desk, but why not place them where patrons can also benefit? Perhaps a few extra shelves need be added, but the expense would be negligible. Some librarians may say that patrons cannot always use such indexes to the best advantage, but we have proven, in three different libraries, that with a little guidance patrons (including students) soon learn to use these indexes at the index table easily and well. The reference librarian will soon find that her work will be lightened in many instances by this arrangement, and more intelligent users of the library will be the result of her efforts.

For those unfamiliar with the construction of the index table, perhaps a word of explanation might be useful. The table consists of 2 rows of double-faced shelves, built up from the center of a regular library table. The indexes may be distributed on both sides, according to their use. When special book indexes are to be included, it is suggested that the upper section be reserved for them, and the periodical indexes placed on the lower section because of their size. Obviously, all indexes cannot be thus segregated (for instance, indexes to sets of books), but at least the most useful and popular can be included. "Sketches of two tables designed for library use — one for magazine indexes and the other for such tools as the United States Catalog have been sent to A.L.A. headquarters by members of the committee on library equipment and appliances. They may be borrowed, upon request, from the library at A.L.A. headquarters," according to a notice in the A.L.A. Bulletin a few years ago.² We presume this information is still available. Pictures and descriptions of similar tables appear in various Wilson Library Bulletin articles.^{3 4}

AUTHORITIES; ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

No exact list of authorities is possible because the sources for this work are multitudinous! While of course the most important ones are the recognized lists of reference books Mudge, (Shores, Winchell), government documents (Boyd, Schmeckebier, Wilcox), periodicals (Haskell, Roys), yet every library catalog, every publisher's trade catalog was a possible source for indexes. For over seven years we collected indexes; it was a hobby for spare hours and evenings! But, as Mr. Faxon wrote us in 1935: "such a subject can never be complete no matter how long you wait or how diligently you search." When, therefore, a comprehensive list proved infeasible, the job of selection became necessary.

Selection in special subject fields would likewise have been an impossible task without the aid of fellow librarians, librarians who are specialists in their own subject fields, and whose help we greatly appreciate. As a former reference librarian, we also appreciate the cooperation of librarians in Southern California who made their reference services easily available to us, and in some instances even loaned us reference books for home use! Therefore we wish to take this opportunity to thank those librarians and others for their willing assistance. We wish to say, however, that we assume full responsibility for errors in all subject fields, since our advisers did not see the finished work, which necessarily contained some changes from their original suggestions.

DR. LOUIS SHORES, Director of Peabody Library School, Nashville, Tenn., for the great amount of time spent in examining our cards, and for his splendid suggestions especially in the field of Education.

MISS MARGARET ROYS, Assistant supervisor, Catalog dept., in charge of serials, Columbia university libraries, N. Y. city, for her generous loan of current periodical index cards, supplementing her published lists, and also for her revision of many of our own cards. MR. JOHN CONNOR, of the Columbia university medical library, for his suggestions on Medicine.

MR. DANIEL HASKELL, Bibliographer of the New York public library, for solving many problems regarding periodical indexes, and for his willingness to pass on information contained in his bibliography before its publication.

MR. THOMAS DABAGH, Law librarian of the Los Angeles Co. law library, for his detailed advice and suggested arrangement of Law indexes.

MISS MARION EWING, Assistant librarian of the Pomona College library, Claremont, California, for making easily available government document and other indexes contained in the splendid collection of that library. We also appreciate her loan of several reference books.

MISS HELEN COWLES, Reference librarian of the Claremont Colleges library, for extending the use of all reference services in that library.

MISS ALTHEA WARREN, Librarian of the Los Angeles public library, for granting permission for the use of special services and collections. We also thank the staff of the Teachers dept. of L.A.P.L. for their always-willing service, especially MISS ROSEMARY LIVSEY, head of department, and MR. ARMINE MCKENZIE, assistant in the department. MRS. PAOLA WHITE PATRICK, of the Genealogical department of the Los Angeles public library, for her suggestions on Genealogy.

MRS. FRANCES DAVIS, Librarian of the Bureau of Power and Light Library, Los Angeles, for the loan of a reference book; MISS EVELYN HUSTON, Librarian of the Bureau of Governmental Research, University of California at Los Angeles, for a similar loan.

The University of Southern California School of Library Service class of 1938, for their "hunting out" additional indexes in connection with the Reference course during the 2d semester of that year. GUIDO FERRARI, chairman of the Index committee, for his good work.

DAVID E. IRELAND, my husband, who as a statistician and graduate student gave me his criticism on the use of such a list, and assisted in the compilation of the Frequency Table reports.

The Reference librarians who so willingly coöperated in the Frequency Table.

APPENDIX

FREQUENCY TABLE; THE USE OF INDEXES IN REFERENCE WORK

The Frequency Table has been compiled in order to indicate the approximate frequency with which the various indexes are used in reference work. Questionnaires were sent to a representative number of libraries including public, college and university, state, and teachers' training institutions. Returns were received from 23 different states.

We asked that the indexes be rated according to five separate categories (see Table, below), in order that the indexes could be more easily and accurately classified. No list of indexes was attached to the questionnaires, and according to the limitations of our work (see Preface, viii) no foreign publications were to be included. Altho there was some variance in type classification of titles, we have taken this fact into consideration in computing points and the results are as statistically accurate as possible.

Some factors must be considered in the interpretation of the Table, however, for instance the low rating of a few books which seemingly should be higher. There are several reasons for this, one of which is the strict interpretation of the word "index" which caused many reference librarians to omit quotation books, for example (see Preface, vii). Yet, on the other hand, some titles were listed which we did not include in our work. Another factor which made a difference in the rating of some titles was the departmentalization of large libraries, which made classification difficult. Then, too, some special subject indexes, such as those in children's literature, are not usually found in a general reference room.

In addition to the titles included in the Frequency Table, there were of course many others which received a smaller number of votes. 218 indexes were submitted in all, but since only 70 were requested we have only included that number in our final Table.
